A Mother's Work is Never Done

she lies awake when you are gone she listens to you and hears your concern it is for your happiness that she seems to yearn she stays up late to finish the dishes and remains calm when you spill your wishes a mother is baking while everyone sleeps and when you can't hear her she often weeps she prays for your soul and asks God for his care when you have been gone too long and its cold in the air a mother gives her advice and heeds her own feelings while she talks and you look at the ceiling when she tells you no its because she has been there before and she doesn't want her child to be hurt anymore she takes the burdens and carries them well and prays for her children to always do well

A mothers work is never done, for I know I have a mother of my own I love her dear and treat her kind for I know someday she will leave me behind who will I have I do not know but I will carry my mother wherever life may go I am a mother and the same thing she told me I tell my child....'son listen to me' no a mothers work is never done and I know this because I am one so love your mother no matter the cost she is all you have when you've fought and lost
